Although some oil entered the storm drain system, there is no danger of drinking water being contaminated, said TW Company service manager Joe Parkinson.

"This is totally a drain system for your storm drains," Parkinson said. "We've already had the city out here making sure it hasn't gone into one of the other systems."

Clean up is estimated at costing tens of thousands of dollars, which Pennzoil will pay for, said Pennzoil spokesman Mickey Gentry.

Both the truck driver, Robison Scott, of Provo, and the passenger of the car he hit, Howard Lysager, of Orem, were treated for minor injuries at Columbia Timpanogos Regional Hospital and later released.

LAS VEGAS — The Cougars face another real challenge today at 2:30 p.m., taking on the Rice Owls in the semifinals of the WAC tournament.

"There are still a lot of emotions from our last game (against Utah). We played very good and very hot, and hopefully we can keep the adrenaline flowing," said coach Trent Shippen after Thursday's practice.

The Owls are infamous this season for surprising upsets. They defeated both WAC division champs, Hawaii and Utah, during the regular season. In this week's tournament, they defeated UTEP by a solid 20 points, 88-68.

"Rice has a lot of depth. They are a very good team, and they are extremely hot right now," Shippen said. "They have had huge victories over Hawaii and Utah, both ranked teams. They also just killed UTEP in this tournament."

The Cougars and the Owls have not played this season, but in past meetings they have split, both teams winning on their own home court.

Rice had a season record of 19-7 and 11-3 in the WAC. The Owls have thrived off of stifling defense this year, allowing the opposition only 59 points per game.

Junior point guard Charonda Wilson has been the primary leader for the Owls on the defensive end of the floor, leading the team with 3.4 steals per contest.

Rice's offense depends on the speed and athleticism of sophomores Kirra Jordan and Marla Brumfield. The duo averages 13.5 and 12.8 points per game, respectively.

"We are really going to have to have an inside-outside game. ... The Owls have four players that are scoring double digits, so you can't just shut one of them down," Shippen said. "Our defense is going to have to be excellent.

...egislative session ... early close this ...m. instead of its ...midnight close.

...y finished two ...ds of hours were ...of the session by ...lobbyists, special ...legislators decid... ...ted money and ...will live by for at ...and resolutions ...Legislature, 463 ...lators, including Speaker of the House Mel Brown, R-Salt Lake City, praised the efficiency with which the session was handled.

"This speaks toward the work ethic and commitment of this delegation," Brown said.

House Minority Leader David Jones, D-Salt Lake City, said he was grateful that the Republicans did not use their majority influence to shut the small group of Democrats out of the legislative process.

"This is the most efficient system I have been a part of, especially these last two years. This is due to the majority leadership and the other members of leadership as well," Jones said.

"You've all gone out of your way this session to get information to us on a timely basis, ahead of time, so we had a chance to respond in thoughtful ways," he said.

Senate leaders echoed these sentiments.

"I think year by year, as we keep up with this, it is a better system, and we're not going to make ... rapid movements where nobody has any idea what they are voting on.

"And this year we did not do it. We never limited our debate one time," said Craig Peterson, R-Utah and Senate majority leader.

One of the other possible reasons the session passed smoothly was that few controversial issues were debated during this election year.

"They chose to just not deal with almost everything controversial," said Rep. Tammy Rowan, R-Utah. "We've dealt with the issues we needed to, and they chose not to deal with the others, and it kind of just kept it peaceful."

Legislators decided on the I-15 bond issue early in the week.

"Transportation funding was bonded at a higher level than we really wanted this year, primarily because of the lack of federal funds," said Assistant Majority Whip John Valentine, R-Utah. "So it's very frustrating that we are having to bear the whole burden here in Utah on Utah taxpayers."

Some of the other major legislation passed included House Bill 137 — Children's Health Insurance Program. This bill allows the state to match federal funds in order to provide health insurance to children whose parents don't qualify for Medicaid, but who still fall under the poverty level.

Another important bill regarding children's issues was Senate Bill 26 — Utah Child Care Licensing Act Revisions. This bill loosens state regulations placed on home child care providers by requiring only a residential certificate for providers of five-to-eight children and a full license for those caring for more than eight children.

HB44 — Telemarketing Requirements — requires telemarketers to identify themselves and the purpose of the call immediately. The telemarketer is also required to discontinue the solicitation immediately if the consumer is not interested.

Utah drivers received attention at the Legislature this year in the form of two new bills.

HB14 — Motor Vehicle Safety Inspection — will reduce the number of inspections to every other year for cars less than five years old.

SB50 — Property Taxes Uniform Fees and Certified Tax Rate — provides a cap of $150 on property tax charged to vehicles.

The governor must sign bills into law or veto them by March 24. Bills passed will go into effect May 4, unless otherwise specified in the legislation.

Legislative Top 6

- Nuclear, radioactive waste: The Legislature passed a bill requiring a $5 million licensing fee and a $2 billion bond from any company wanting to store nuclear-reactor waste in Utah.
- Borrowing for roads: The Legislature approved up to $240 million in bonds to help finance the 10-year, $2.83 billion Centennial Highway Trust Fund, which includes the $1.59 billion reconstruction of I-15 in Salt Lake County.
- Less licensing for in-home day-care providers: Saying the responsibility lies with the parents, lawmakers voted to ease the licensing standards for in-home day-care providers.
- Radical changes in vehicle taxes: Lawmaker replaced the much-maligned property tax on vehicles with an easy-to-understand flat fee system that is based on the age of the vehicle, not its value.
- Health insurance extended to poor children: The Children's Health Insurance Program, a national initiative funded by cigarette taxes, will provide insurance for 30,000 children from poor, working families.
- Alcohol/tobacco restrictions: Drunken drivers, beware; Lawmakers passed one bill to restrict driver's licenses for drunken drivers and another that increases penalties against those who hurt people while drunk behind the wheel.

Police kill 20 separatists in Serbia

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Cracking down on militant separatists in southern Yugoslavia's Kosovo province, police killed 20 ethnic Albanians on Thursday, state-run television reported.

Police armed with assault rifles set up roadblocks and turned back reporters, making it impossible to verify what was happening. Months of rising tensions and clashes erupted into violence last weekend in the region, which is part of Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic.

Ninety percent of Kosovo's 2 million people are ethnic Albanians. Most favor secession from Serbia, which has established a massive police and military presence in the province.

Since 1989, the Albanians have established their own taxation, schooling, medical and other institutions in Kosovo. Serbia refused to recognize the parallel state, but did not see it as much of a threat.

Last spring, however, the Kosovo Liberation Army emerged, specializing in hit-and-run attacks and apparently financed by Albanians living abroad.

Simultaneously, order collapsed in neighboring Albania and residents looted an estimated one million guns from state armories. Tens of thousands of those guns are now thought to be in Kosovo.

Spare wrench found too late for Mir

MOSCOW — Two days after cosmonauts reported they had broken their entire supply of wrenches trying to open a hatch, forcing cancellation of a spacewalk, the crew had even more embarrassing news Thursday: They found a spare.

Mission Control spokeswoman Irina Manshilina said the crew spotted the extra wrench somewhere on the cluttered, 12-year-old orbiter.

"It's possible that there are more of them still lying around somewhere," Manshilina said.

The spacewalk was canceled Tuesday after the two Russian cosmonauts, Nikolai Budarin and Talgat Musabayev, said they broke all three of their wrenches on a particularly tight lock on the hatch leading to outer space.

Intel loses clout in stock market

NEW YORK — Technology stocks fell sharply Thursday, led by Intel Corp., which was off almost 13 percent after warning its quarterly revenue and profit would fall below expectations.

Intel cited surprisingly sluggish demand for personal computers in its announcement after the close of financial markets late Wednesday.

That spilled over through the computer industry, pulling down the likes of Dell, Microsoft and International Business Machines.

The Nasdaq Stock Market fell 2.7 percent and was down 47.80 at 1,711.90, according to preliminary figures, its third biggest point drop ever. The Dow Jones industrial average, off as much as 133.52, closed down 94.16 at 8,445.08, according to preliminary figures, the biggest one-day point drop since Jan. 9.

7 killed in Sudan hospital bombing

NAIROBI, Kenya — A Sudanese air force plane bombed a hospital in a rebel-controlled town in southern Sudan Thursday, killing seven patients and injuring 48 others, an aid official said.

The raid hit a hospital at Yei, about 90 miles southwest of the main southern town of Juba, said Dan Effie of Norwegian People's Aid, which runs the hospital.

The plane is believed to have taken off from Juba, the largest government-controlled town in southern Sudan, about 740 miles from the capital, Khartoum.

"It is obvious the hospital was the target," Effie said.

Government officials were not immediately available for comment.

He said the bomber made four runs, dropping 13 bombs. A bunker used to shelter patients took a direct hit and seven patients were killed. The operating theater and equipment were destroyed.

The rebels took up arms in 1983 to press for autonomy and development for the predominantly Christian, black and animist south, which has been dominated by the Muslim north.

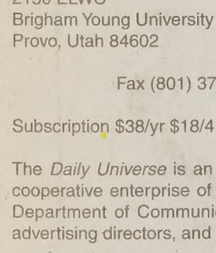
Scripture of the Day



"And whoso receiveth you, there I will be also, for I will go before your face. I will be on your right hand and on your left, and my Spirit shall be in your hearts, and mine angels round about you, to bear you up."

— Doctrine and Covenants 84:88

Kayla Rehme likes this scripture because "it reminds me that the Lord will be with us in everything we do, surrounding and supporting us." Kayla is a freshman from Loreland, Colo, majoring in music education.

The Provo Canyon Coalition has teamed with the American Canoe Association, the Utah Rivers Council and the owner of Western Rivers Flyfishers, a fishing equipment business in Salt Lake City, to ensure the road stays eight feet from the river.

Listed in the notice as defendants are UDOT, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Utah Department of Environmental Quality and Obayashi Corp., the Los Angeles based road contractor.

"Hopefully, it won't turn into a lawsuit, but we're prepared to take it that far," Mack said. "It is a clear message to UDOT that we don't accept their plan, and the river must be protected."

UDOT attorney Randy Hunter said the notice is groundless and that the plaintiffs will lose if they go to court.

"(The plaintiffs) have shown repeatedly they don't know how to read the plans," Hunter said. "On every construction project there are some problems and unforeseeable circumstances that arise. We're working with everybody. There are really no problems."

The biggest point of contention is along a bend in the river just west of Vivian Park, where retaining walls threaten to encroach within a few feet of the water.

Environmentalists say that is too close.

To keep the up-canyon lanes away from the river, the two newly constructed down-canyon lanes may have to be torn up and moved over, along with an underground pipeline adjacent to the road. That could add several hundred thousand dollars to the project.

The Army Corps and UDOT are working on an alternative that would keep the down-canyon lanes where they are, and lowering the up-canyon lanes so that retaining walls would not be necessary.

The up-canyon lanes would be 8 feet from the river, but guard rails would have to be installed between the lanes and the river.

"That sounds like construction within a buffer zone and that is unacceptable," Mack said.

Hunter scoffed. "A guardrail does nothing to cause water pollution. I mean, let's get serious here."

...or more than $7,000 ...rom the last busi... City Council has ...hat the fees must ...7.
...il's stance is that ...oing to come back ... and explain to us why they haven't paid their franchise fees," said councilman David Rail. "If they haven't paid, then we're going to possibly set a date for a hearing to revoke their franchise."

Cable service to 3,750 Provo Cable subscribers would be lost if the franchise is revoked. The company provides service not only to Provo, but to Cedar Hills, Pleasant Grove and Lindon as well.

Mike Pierce, president of Provo Cable, said the franchise fee will be paid before the end of the week.

In 1992, a contract that required Provo Cable to pay for the use of public streets was signed between the company and Provo City.

The contract also required the company to expand its business to 90 percent of Provo by Oct. 1997.

However, Provo Cable has been paying a $250 fine for each day after the October deadline that its contract agreement was not met.

Provo Cable's major stock holder, Northstar Communications, filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy to reorganize the company to accomplish the 90 percent expansion.

The bankruptcy has had a lateral effect, West said. Because the money for Provo Cable comes from Northstar, Provo Cable does not have the money while Northstar is in bankruptcy.

Northstar filed bankruptcy Aug. 26, 1997, but plans to emerge from Chapter 11 in 90 days, Pierce said.

In Chapter 11, you come up with a plan to reorganize your business," said Robert West, assistant city attorney. "Companies may reorganize to sell the company or pay off debts."

Pierce said the company has a funding commitment to investors of $8 million, which will be spent on the expansion.

"As they expand, they will run lines and do special services for the community," said Greg Hudnall, council chairman.

"What we are building will be unique for this area," Pierce said.

Pierce said Provo Cable plans to build a two-way cable system with fiber optic and coaxial cables. The system will allow for services such as the Internet and video conferences, rather than just cable.

Provo Cable carries Real Time Classes, which are college courses transmitted over cable, through the fiber optic network, Pierce said. Some high school students in Utah County can obtain college credit by sitting in a classroom in their school and learning from a professor in a studio classroom at Utah Valley State College.

"We have a bright future," he said.

When Pierce became president a year ago, the company was having financial problems. Pierce has increased revenues by 50 percent and has contracted for building expansion.

NASA scientists find frozen water on moon

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Enough water is frozen in the loose soil of the moon to support a lunar base and perhaps one day build a human colony there, NASA scientists said Thursday.

"We are certain there is water there," said Alan Binder, a lead scientist for the Lunar Prospector spacecraft, which made the discovery.

"We think we are seeing between 10 million and 100 million tons of water."

Although the water is frozen and mixed with shaded soil deep in scattered craters near the north and south lunar poles, Binder said that it would be easy to convert to liquid water that could be used to make rocket propellant and breathing oxygen.

Preliminary estimates indicate that the moon holds enough water, in widely separated deposits, to fill a lake 2 miles square and 35 feet deep, Binder said.

The discovery of water, he said, means that it would be easier to establish a base where people could live for extended periods and to use extraterrestrial resources — moon water converted to rocket fuel — to explore deeper into the solar system.

"For the first time, we may be able to go to another space body and fuel up," said Binder.

The Lunar Prospector, a $65 million robot craft, was launched in January and has spent the last seven weeks orbiting the moon and taking readings of the moon's surface with radar and other instruments.

Water was discovered by an instrument that measures the speed at which neutrons, a type of subatomic particle, bounce off materials on and near the lunar surface.

The neutrons, which come from natural cosmic rays that constantly bathe the moon, are slowed when they strike atoms of hydrogen, the chemical that combines with oxygen to make water.

William Feldman, an Energy Department scientist who analyzed the neutron data, said conclusions about water are based on a month's worth of data and should be called "preliminary."

But he said it is quite clear there are dense deposits of hydrogen atoms at the lunar poles. From this, he said he believes "the evidence of water ice is quite strong."

"There are a bunch of craters filled up with water ice," said Feldman. "This is a significant resource that will allow a modest amount of colonization for many years."

Lawyers maintain teen's innocence

Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — Lawyers for a New Jersey teen-ager accused of killing her newborn son maintained Thursday she is innocent of murder because she believed she had a miscarriage and never saw the baby before the child's father discarded the body.

Amy Grossberg and her high school sweetheart, Brian Peterson, both 19, are charged with first-degree murder in the baby's death in November 1996. The trial is scheduled for May.

Grossberg and Peterson are both free on $300,000 bond.

President Thomas S. Monson

First Counselor in the Church First Presidency and President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Before his current calling in March 1995, President Thomas S. Monson had served for 10 years as Second Counselor in the LDS Church First Presidency. He was ordained an Apostle and called to the Council of the Twelve Apostles in October of 1963. He presided over the Church's Canadian Mission from 1959 to 1962 and has served in a stake presidency and as a bishop.

President Monson graduated cum laude from the University of Utah in 1948, earning a degree in business management. He later received his MBA from Brigham Young University, and in 1981 BYU conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa. He is a U.S. Navy veteran and is a member of Alpha Kappa Psi honorary business fraternity.

President Monson has had a distinguished career in publishing and printing. He is a past president of Printing Industry of Utah and a former member of the Printing Industry of America's board of directors. He serves as a trustee of Brigham Young University and the LDS Church Board of Education.

For many years, President Monson served as a member of the Utah State Board of Regents, which governs higher education throughout the state. In 1991 he was appointed by President Reagan to serve on the President's Task Force for Private Sector Universities. In 1997 he received the Utah National Guard Minuteman Award and BYU's Exemplary Manhood Award.

President Monson was honored with the University of Utah's Distinguished Alumnus Award in 1966. He is recipient of the Silver Beaver and Silver Buffalo Awards from the Boy Scouts of America, and he holds Scouting's highest honor, the Bronze Wolf Award.

He married Frances Beverly Johnson in 1948 in the Salt Lake Temple. They are the parents of three children and grandparents of seven.

Fashion is smashin'

Celebrating diversity and unity was the goal of the international fashion show and banquet Thursday night.

"The purpose of the event was to show everyone how different the cultures are, but how we are still the same.

"We're children of our Heavenly Father," said Gabriela Frunza, the director of the fashion show.

Frunza is from Romania and has lived in the United States for one and a half years. As the president of the International Student Association, she said she designed the show so the true culture of each nation could be expressed.

"Just walking would be boring. I wanted the students to dance, sing, play instruments, so the audience could really experience the culture," Frunza said.

The United States was also represented, with a Native American hoop dance by Joseph Ahuna, 18, an open major freshman from Hawaii.

"I love the cultural exchange that goes on, and I always enjoy sharing my talent," Ahuna said.

Ethnic cuisine from six different countries, including Thailand, Mexico and Australia spiced up the evening.

Frunza said she hoped this event would help prove that BYU is an international university and that the world truly is our campus.

No date? Great dates up for sale

If it's another Saturday night and you ain't got nobody, head over to the dance and date auction sponsored by BYU multicultural clubs this Saturday.

During the dance, five clubs will auction off dates planned by club members to earn funds for club activities and service.

"You don't buy the date-person, you bid on the date activities someone has planned," said Ruth Stubbs, 21, a senior from Fallon, Nev. majoring in social work.

The club members who planned the date will remain anonymous.

"The dates auctioned off are planned by quality guys and girls. It should be really fun," said Will Varner, 24, a sophomore from Azusa, Calif., majoring in illustration.

"I'll look for a date that is fun and a little unusual," said Varner who also plans on bidding on a date. Varner said fun, unusual activities will show that his date will have a sense of humor.

Local restaurants and theaters have donated free dinner or show tickets for some of the dates, said Tribe of Many Feathers officer Janee Livingston, 20, a junior from Snowflake, Ariz., majoring in recreational management and youth leadership.

Many creative and fun date ideas have been thought of, such as a spy game, ice skating, dinner at a cabin, and hiking with a sunset dinner, Livingston said.

All activities will be in groups of two or more and over 30 group dates will be auctioned, Livingston said.

"Of course I'm going to bid on a date," said Emily Arroyo, 22, a senior from San Antonio, Texas majoring in public relations.

Five different clubs are sponsoring the activity: the Salsa Club, the Polynesian Club, Asian-American Association, Tribe of Many Feathers and the Black Students Union. The clubs will use the money earned from the dance and date auction to fund club activities.

The dance begins at 8:30 p.m. and the date auction at 10 p.m. in the ELWC Terrace; tickets are $2.

Does milk really come from the cow?

By JESSICA GLEASON
Universe Staff Writer

Between 2000 and 3000 kindergarten children and first graders will be bussed to the Leo B. Ellsworth Meat and Livestock Center today to meet some of the animals that BYU's animal science majors work with on a daily basis.

For almost 10 years, BYU's chapter of the Block and Bridal Club has been sponsoring 'Day on the Farm,' a service project for area students and members of the community.

Warren Kuhl, an administrative staff member of the Animal Science Department, is the advisor of Block and Bridal, and was the originator of 'Day on the Farm.' Kuhl says the purpose of the service project is to "afford children the rare opportunity to come into contact with food and companionship animals."

Jon Bailey, 23, a junior from Lehi, majoring in pre-veterinary, said there were children at 'Day on the Farm' last year who didn't know that milk came from cows.

Bailey said he thinks the Block and Bridal service project is valuable because "(little kids) get to see things that they really miss out on if they grow up in the city."

There are dairy cows at 'Day in the Farm' for those that don't know where milk comes from, as well as sheep, horses, goats, pigs and rabbits.

Among the informational booths at the Ellsworth Center, there will be an area where the children can pet lambs, kits, calves and rabbits.

Jared Gailey, from Fallon, Nev. majoring in microbiology, said 'Day on the Farm' is worth all of the hard work because it is "a chance for a lot of kids to see farm animals and get a little glimpse of what I enjoy about agriculture."

The Ellsworth Center, at 2230 N. 50 East, will be open for visitors from the community from 2:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. today.

BYU celebrates Women's Month

By MALI HEGDAHL
Universe Staff Writer

March has been internationally designated Women's Month to celebrate the accomplishments and possibilities of women. The theme for Women's Month at BYU is "Celebrating Women: Past, Present, and Future."

It is important for BYU to celebrate Women's Month, said Jean Taylor Scott, coordinator of Women's Services & Resources. The world sends some messages regarding men and women that most people at BYU do not fully agree with, she said.

"I wanted to have a special celebration for women at BYU that would advocate the values we hold dear," Scott said.

"I think we're hoping it will raise awareness of not just women's issues, but women's contributions as well," said Janet Scharman, dean of students and associate Student Life vice president.

There are positive things already going on around campus, Scharman said.

A panel discussion entitled "Prioritizing in the Nineties: Education, Career, and Family" is only one of the planned events.

Quilts will be tied in the Wilkinson Center Terrace March 17-19. Any student can help tie quilts, which will then be given to a women's shelter.

Women's Month was created in memory of an 1857 protest. A group of women organized a strike against low wages, long hours and poor working conditions.

Faith, love required to provide service throughout world

By MALI HEGDAHL
Universe Staff Writer

Camille Fronk, assistant professor of ancient scripture, spoke about worldwide service as part of Women's Month at a lecture on campus Thursday.

Fronk's message, entitled "Liberal to All, Whether Out of the Church or In the Church," focused on helping people throughout the world.

She used the example of the people of Nephi in the Book of Mormon.

"They were liberal to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, whether out of the church or in the church, having no respect to persons as to those who stood in need," she read.

People must have faith to help people around the world, no matter who they are, Fronk said.

She said it is important to remember the two great commandments. Individuals must first love God and then love their neighbors.

Fronk said there are many ways for women to help.

Referring to a U.N. study on women, she said, "While women make up approximately half of the world's population, they do approximately two-thirds of the world's work. They earn approximately one-tenth of the world's income and own approximately one-hundredth of the world's property."

Fronk said that it may be easy for people to see ways in which women are hampered from doing many things in the world. She said she would rather focus on opportunities women have to decrease suffering around the world.

Fronk has traveled to several countries in her efforts to improve the lives of others. She has helped establish schools and houses in small villages all over the world.

Police Beat

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF:

Two residents of Deseret Towers were reported throwing eggs from the roof of the Q-Hall building Tuesday. A University Police investigation found both a sack full of empty egg cartons on the roof and the identities of the suspects. The students then admitted to the incident and were both issued $300 citations.

HARASSMENT:

While walking up the northwest stairs of the Jesse Knight Humanities Building, a student was repeatedly pinched in the buttocks by an unknown male individual behind him. The suspect then fled when he was later confronted by the victim. The suspect is described as a 5-foot-6-inch, 160-pound man, with blond hair and approximately 25 years old.

ASSAULT:

On Feb. 27, University Police received a report of an assault in U-Hall of Deseret Towers. Two students were involved in a fight over the control panel to a Nintendo game. One of the individuals involved was issued a citation for assault and referred to the Honor Code Office.

At 11:30 p.m., Feb. 27, the Provo Police notified the University Police of a fight in progress west of the Utah Valley State College campus. After arriving, police learned that the combatants had already left the area. A bystander was reportedly struck in the face and taken to the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center for treatment of a broken nose. Charges are pending for assault and disorderly conduct.

Police recently received a report of an assault that occurred during a basketball game in the Richards Building on Feb. 13. Participants and witnesses are being interviewed and the case is still under investigation.

TRESPASSING:

At 2 a.m., Feb. 27, police were notified that unauthorized vehicles were driving on the Intramural Field causing damage. The vehicles were later located and the drivers identified. Police are waiting for a damage estimate from Grounds Maintenance.

At 3:45 p.m., March 3, police received a report of an unauthorized vehicle driving on the Intramural Field. However, the dark blue Toyota pickup had already left the area when the officers arrived and the case is still being investigated.

THEFT:

A pair of green corduroy pants were stolen from the laundry facility at V-Hall of Deseret Towers. The pants were valued at $40.

A planner was stolen from B220 HFAC Feb. 26. between 3 and 5:15 p.m. A 30-year-old student, who was working in the area, had left it unattended.

A 20-year-old visitor to campus reported that her purse had been stolen from 206 RB. The purse and its contents, which had been left in the room, were valued at $200.

MISCELLANEOUS:

On Feb. 28, police received a report of a possible suicidal resident in V-Hall of Deseret Towers. Concerned for the welfare of the student, officers contacted the standby counselor from the counseling office. The counselor remained with the student and resolved the situation.

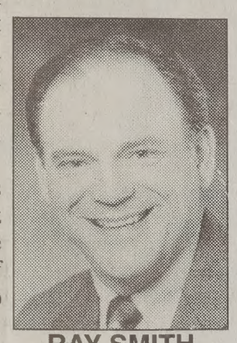
Smith dazzles as Synthesis director

By MEGAN ELISON
Universe Staff Writer

Comparing people to gemstones, Ray Smith is definitely a jewel of jazz. In fact, ask anyone about Jazz Fest and they'll tell you that the person who knows it all is Ray Smith.



RAY SMITH

Smith is Director of Jazz Studies in the BYU School of Music, and also directs the university's top jazz ensemble, Synthesis. He also plays saxophone with the Faculty Jazz Quintet.

Apart from participating with university jazz groups, Smith has toured and recorded with some fairly well-known local musicians, including Kurt Bestor. He performed with Johnny Mathis, The Supremes and The Fifth Dimension, and has recorded back-up for Frank Sinatra and various national ads.

Smith first came to BYU as an undergraduate, where he made a name for himself by playing lead alto sax with Synthesis. After graduate studies and spending time learning from David Baker — one of the world's top jazz educators — Smith returned to BYU to become jazz director in 1982.

"I was bitten by the bug early and I've always loved it ever since," Smith said. "I can't get enough of it."

But Smith's addiction to jazz music began long before he ever came to BYU.

"It was in the seventh grade that I heard the high school jazz band," Smith said. "I went to the junior high for a fathers and sons event and the high school jazz band came over. I thought it was the greatest thing I had ever heard. I remember they played the 'Pink Panther Theme' by Hank Mancini, and I just ate it up. I thought, 'I've got to play in a group like that,'" Smith said.

Smith got his chance to play with the high school band sooner than he expected. When the varsity band's tenor sax quit, the band director asked Smith, then a sophomore, to tryout as a replacement.

"He said, 'Do you play tenor sax?' and I said, 'Oh, yeah!'" Smith said. "I had never played it before in my life."

That afternoon, Smith checked out a tenor sax from the school and began to work through some pieces he had been studying earlier.

"He (the band director) was in his office with the door locked and it didn't even occur to me that he might be listening," Smith said. "He came out after a few minutes and he said, 'You're in.'"

Becoming the only sophomore in the varsity jazz band was only the beginning for Smith, who went on to musical notoriety in college.

As director of Synthesis, Smith has had numerous competition and touring opportunities. The group uses tours to bring recognition to both BYU and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"We've found that it is an incredible missionary tool," Smith said. "To be able to use this music, that I've loved so long, for doing missionary work is really an incredible thing to me."

Smith's direction of Synthesis is drawing national attention.

"I've had people call me from Minneapolis or Chicago and say, 'Hey, I heard your CD on the radio' — meaning Synthesis," Smith said.

JAZZ FEST 98

So what is it about jazz music that makes the style so attractive to Smith?

"I love improvisation; to be able to make a personal expression on the spot and create it yourself is really a thrill," Smith said. "When it goes well, there are few greater highs."

Future plans for Smith include helping to expand BYU's Department of Music, as well as working on his own CDs and writing books.

Whatever the musician chooses to do, it is sure that his direction has made an impact at BYU.

"He's quite a mentor and example," said Synthesis Drummer David Osmond, a junior from Provo majoring in music performance.

"Ray Smith is really one of BYU's gems," Osmond said.

Gallup lights up Vegas during WAC tournament

By SCOTT BELL
Associate Sports Editor

LAS VEGAS — In a town renowned for being the entertainment capital of the world, Kari Gallup has put her game on center stage.

The BYU senior has put on a breath-taking performance to lead the Cougars to the semifinals of the WAC tournament.

Take a look at some of her numbers over the two games: 56 points, 12-17 shooting from three-point range and 16-17 shooting from the foul line.

In other words, Gallup has been putting up bigger numbers than a loose slot machine. Her game's been as bright as the Vegas skyline.

Scott Bell
Associate Sports Editor

"This year has been great," Gallup said. "My first three years were tough and frustrating sometimes. To finish off this way makes it all worthwhile.

"I mean, the last few years I kind of questioned, 'Should I be here, did I make the right decision?' but this year has answered all those questions."

It's been a sweet run of vindication for Gallup. She came highly regarded from high school in Alberta, Canada. Although her Cougar career has been successful, it has also been filled with disappointments.

Gallup has played for three coaches in her four years and lost to arch-rival Utah the first ten times she played them. Even worse, the Utes knocked BYU out of the WAC tournament in each of Gallup's first three years.

But in the last two meetings between the teams, Gallup has come out on the winning end. Wednesday night's win prematurely ended the 21st-ranked Utes' WAC season and put their NCAA tournament hopes in jeopardy.

"It feels great," Gallup said. "To finally beat them — I couldn't ask for more. The only thing better would be to make the NCAA tournament. They sent me home the first three years. It's nice to stay and actually see how the tournament goes."

Tonight when BYU takes on Rice, Gallup will be looking to lead BYU into the WAC championship game for the first time since 1993. If she plays the way she has been, that's a distinct possibility. But win or lose, Gallup will be sure not to leave anything on the bench.

"I want to go out with no regrets," Gallup said. "I don't want to go out saying, 'Dang, I could've done better.'

"We realize (winning the tournament) is our only shot at getting to the NCAA tournament. For some of us, this is our only shot to keep playing. This is the last year for four of us, and we realize this could be it."

REUNION: The Cougars won on Monday so Barbie Carmichael's sister, Becky Riley, could be here for the game on Wednesday. The Utah game was the first time Riley had seen her sister play a college game, and the Cougars didn't disappoint.

Carmichael didn't have quite the outing against the Utes as she did Monday against Fresno State. She scored only six points after going for 24 against the Bulldogs.

"It was awesome," Riley said. "She played awesome defense."

Riley just returned home from a mission to Ecuador. She was actually supposed to come home later this week but arranged with her president to come home earlier in order to catch the end of Carmichael's career.

Riley, a high school ball player herself, will stay for the rest of the tournament as Carmichael tries to extend her career a few more games.

BENCH SUPPORT: BYU's tournament run has been a bittersweet experience for one team member.

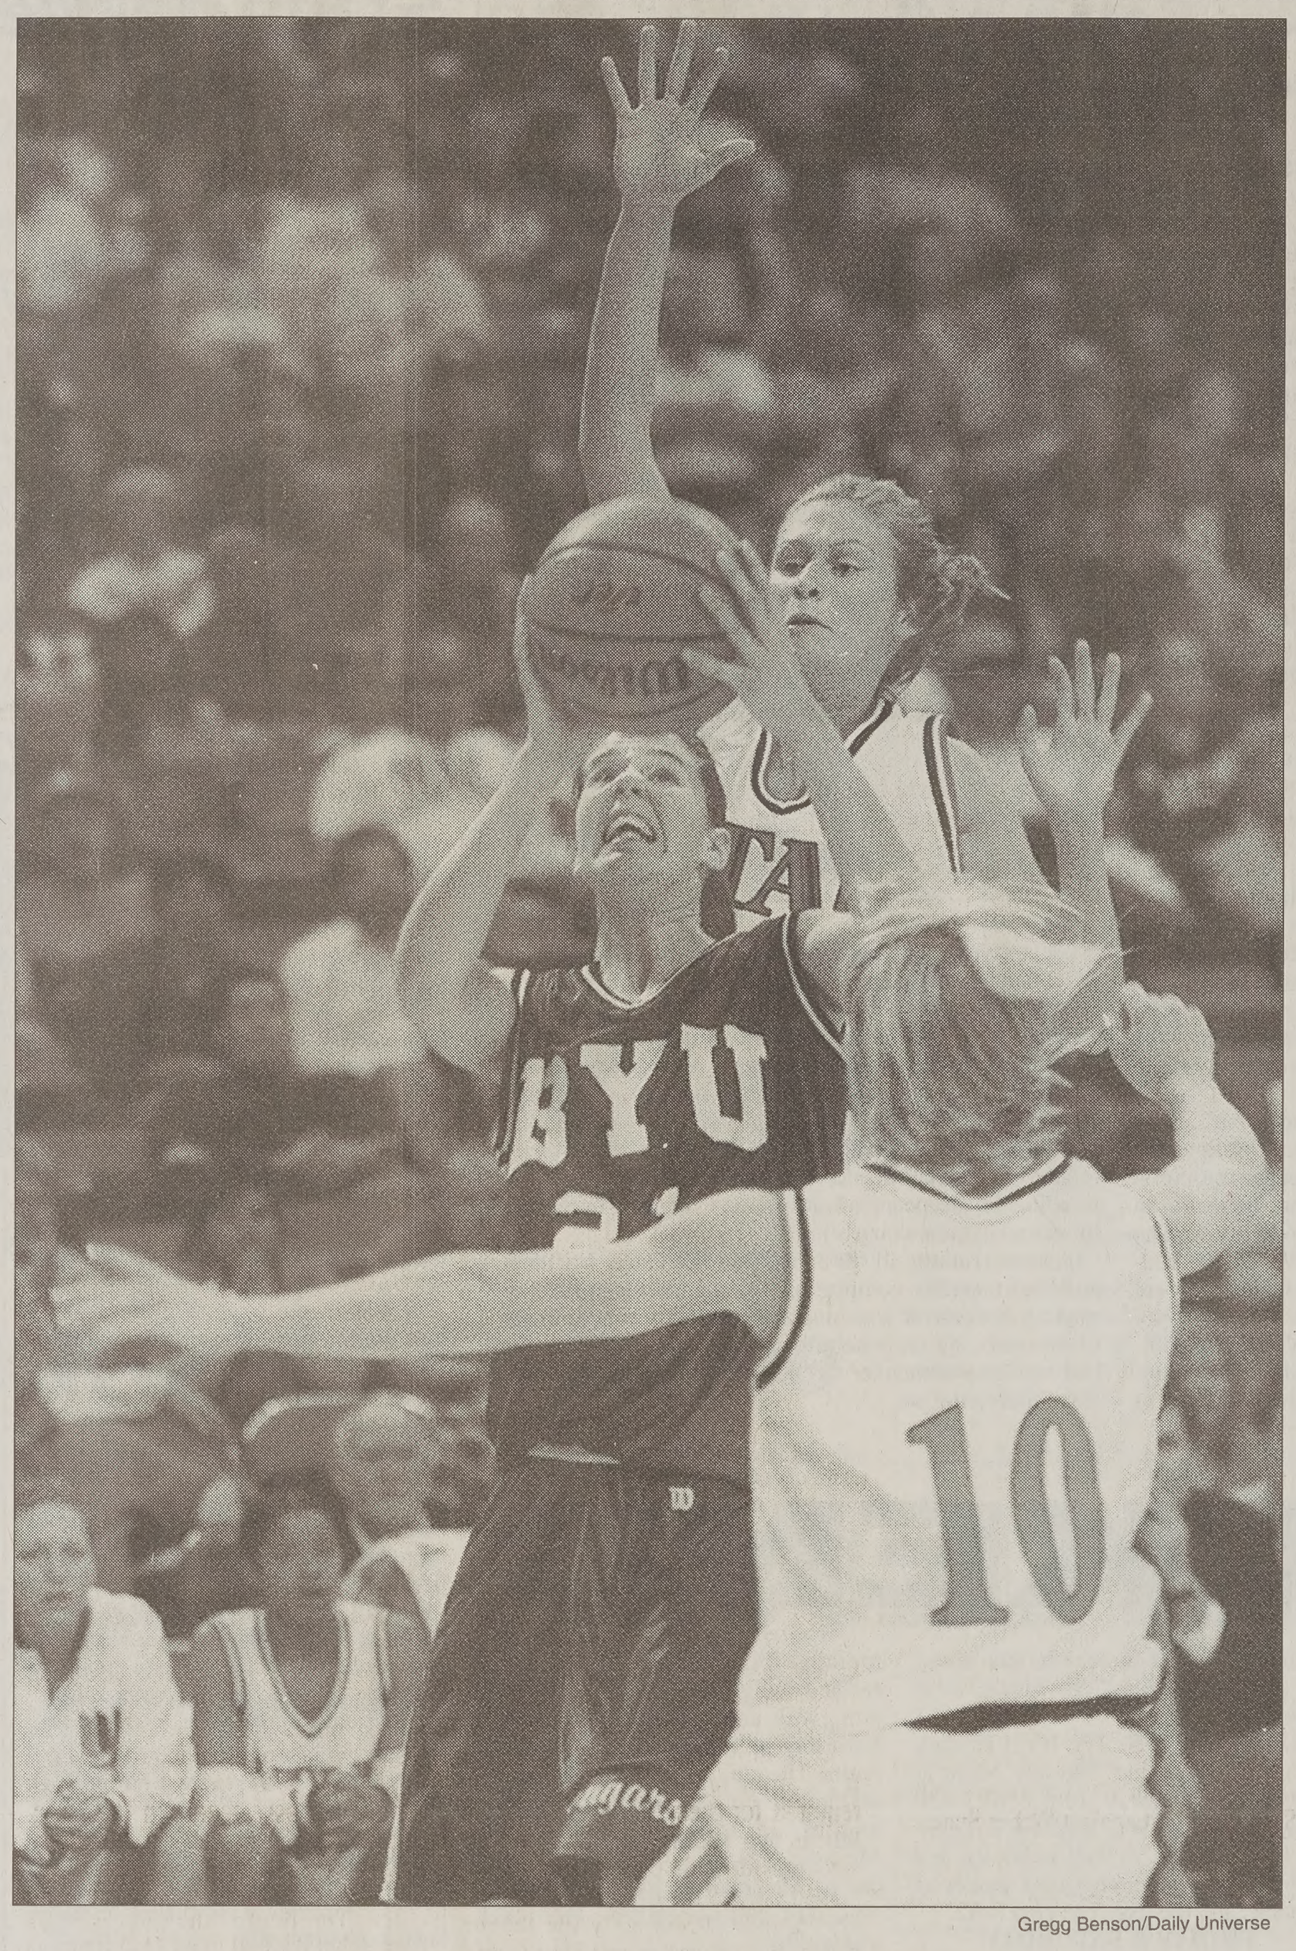
Guard Renae Hansen, the team's second-leading scorer last year, has missed the entire year with a knee injury sustained in the Midnight Madness scrimmage.

Hansen has cheered the team on from the sidelines ever since, while rehabilitating her knee for next year.

"The year's gone by pretty fast actually," Hansen said. "But getting to the end stretch and the WAC tournament, it's been really hard just to watch. Especially when we were playing Utah, it was hard.

"On the other hand, the team's doing awesome. I love cheering for them and giving them as much support as I can."

Hansen will be ready to go next year, but for now must be content with cheering her teammates as far as they can go.



Gregg Benson/Daily Universe

BYU's Kari Gallup shoots between Utah's Alli Bills (10) and Lindsay Sodja during the Cougars' 66-58 victory over the Utes in the second round of the WAC tournament in Las Vegas. Gallup, a senior, is averaging 28 points per game for the tournament, her last games as a Cougar.

Volleyballers to take on Bruins

By ROMNEY M. STEWART
Universe Sports Writer

Tonight and Saturday night the Cougars will play the nation's top ranked team, UCLA, in Los Angeles. UCLA leads the series 24-2, and has never lost to BYU in Pauley Pavilion.

"BYU was picked No. 1 in the preseason poll," said UCLA head coach Al Scates, in his 36th year at the helm of the Bruins.

"They've got two great middle blockers and so do we, so it will be a great matchup," Scates said.

Cougars Shane Van Beest and Ryan Millar are averaging 2.83 and 2.25 blocks per game.

Bruin sophomore setter Brandon Taliaferro, one of the best setters in the nation, is averaging over 15 assists per game, while his 6-10 teammate Adam Naeve is knocking down 5.2 kills per game.

Last year's runner-up to national champion Stanford, UCLA is 15-0 overall, 10-0 in league play and in first place in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation's Mountain division.

The No. 3 BYU men's volleyball team defeated UC-Irvine in the first of its four matches this week in California.

The Cougars defeated the Anteaters in three straight games 16-14, 15-13, and 15-8 Tuesday night.

The UC-Irvine Anteaters are No. 14 in the latest USA TODAY/AVCA poll, and in fourth place in the MPSF's Mountain Division.

In Tuesday's match, junior Ossie Antonetti led the Cougars attack with 30 kills and seven blocks. National blocking leader Shane Van Beest recorded 12 blocks to compliment his 13 kills.

BYU had a great night controlling the ball with a hitting percentage of .456.

BYU is 7-2 for the season and in third place in the Mountain Division behind first place UCLA and second place Pepperdine.

BYU junior Oswald Antonetti bumps a ball during the Cougars' victory over USC Feb. 13. Antonetti and the Cougars head to Los Angeles to face a tough UCLA squad tonight and Saturday.

In the MPSF Pacific Division, The University of Hawaii leads the pack with first place, with Stanford and Long Beach State close behind.

"We're going to go down to UCLA and it's going to be two five-game battles," said BYU player Torry Tukuafu.

"It is going to be tough to match up Brumfield and Jordan. They are some of the top in the nation for scoring, and their point guard is as quick as anybody I have ever seen. We have to come off really strong."

The Cougars have had a rough week in the tournament. Senior Barbie Carmichael got a black eye from a screen against Utah, Amanda Covington received a grade-A concussion in that same game, and Lori Henry is wincing through an injury to her knee. None of the injuries are going to hinder playing time for the Cougars, however.

"We are a little bit tired, so the bench will have to be big for us tonight," Shippen said. "We are just counting on our adrenaline pushing us through."

Though Rice is favored to win the game, the Cougars are optimistic about playing in the championship game and going on t tournament.

"I think we have a g beating Rice and go finals," Gallup said. "W off a real high, and w we lose that we are d playing for our lives."

The semifinal game will be aired live o Channel 11 and live o 1160 AM.

Men's tennis set to battle Boise S

The BYU men's tennis team is looking to pull an upset on their home court as they battle top-ranked Boise State on Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse courts.

After a disappointing 4-3 loss to UNLV last week, the BYU men's tennis team is looking to rebound with a win at home.

"This is the biggest home match of the year," said head coach Jim Osborne. "They are one of the best teams in the region and the best team we will play at home."

Boise State comes into Provo with a 7-4 record and ranked No. 16 in the nation. All four loses have come against top 25 teams.

BYU played Boise State last year in Idaho and lost a close match 4-3. The Cougars had match points at two different times to win the match, but couldn't pull it out. Osborne hopes this can be a motivation factor.

"The guys are itching for a chance to play them at home. We're hoping for a good crowd and hopefully a little revenge from last year," Osborne said.

Osborne says the key to the match will be match the most.

"Boise (State) competes very well. They fighters. We are going to have to play m especially during the big points," Osbor biggest factor for us is that we have homeco

Weber State next up for Rugby t

By STEVE SHAW
Universe Sports Writer

After a tough two-match road trip, the BYU rugby team comes home to host in-state rival Weber State on Saturday at 1 p.m. at Helaman Halls Field, just south of the football stadium.

Facing two of the top five teams in the nation, the Cougars lost a close match to Stanford by one point and played UC-Davis to a tie.

Even though the Cougars couldn't come up with a win, they felt they made some improvements and gained a moral victory.

"We gained a lot of composure coming back in both games, morally we feel we walked away with a win," said junior David Wheeler. "We probably showed the rest of the country that BYU will be there at the end."

"We played two of our best games of the season, we feel we should've won both matches," said team captain Romaine Marshall.

The team is looking to improve on their game and peak at the right time for the playoffs.

"We're anxious to redeem ourselves and get on with the season," Marshall said.

Weber State is the type of team that will play BYU very hard said assistant coach Marc Ormsby. "Everyone likes to do BYU in. (Weber) likes to play a solid game of rugby."

Ormsby said it's hard to figure Weber State out because year in and year out they are an unk ranked 20th, the same spot that Robertson held when the two met previously. Its a good bet that these two will duel it out in the finals to decide the 142-pound champion.

At 150 pounds, BYU junior Gary Sanderson will be looking for revenge on Saturday. Both Tim Cornish of Fresno State and Brian Wood of Wyoming beat Sanderson during the regular season.

BYU sophomore Brett Gappmayer will get a No. 1 seed Saturday. Gappmayer's solid record against WAC competition gives him the upper hand as he comes in undefeated in the WAC in the 158-pound class.

BYU junior Kris West is coming back from a few injuries this season to wrestle in the tournament. West was injured just two weeks ago. But he was able to come back and win the challenge match this week in practice, to earn himself the starting spot at 167 pounds. Schultz hopes to get West a No. 3 seed to help the team start off in a stronger position in the tournament.

Sophomore Corey Anderson will wrestle at 177 pounds for the Cougars. Anderson will also benefit from an undefeated record in the WAC by getting a number one seeding in the tournament.

At 190 pounds, BYU sophomore Jason Johnson will have to deal with Air Force's 16th-ranked Jake Sherer.

BYU freshman Chris Miller has only lost to Jake Sherer of Air Force in a match that Sherer went up a class to compete in. Schultz feels that Miller has a good shot at taking the WAC heavyweight title.

Students can get into the meet for $4 per session or $7 for both sessions. Adult prices are $7 per session and $13 for both sessions.

Gymnasts face Spartans in final home meet

By KAREN DUFFIN
Universe Sports Writer

Fans of BYU men's gymnastics team can see the team compete for the last time at home this season tonight at 7 in the Smith Fieldhouse. The Cougars, one of the best teams in the West, will face eastern powerhouse Michigan State.

The meet should be highly competitive, with two major forces in the world of college gymnastics facing each other.

"This is a big one. It will be a good test for us against a top eastern team like Michigan State," said head coach Mako Sakamoto.

The Cougars have fared well this season, with their two top gymnasts, Fabricio Olsson and Guard Young, hitting career all-around bests.

The team quickly surpassed the 226-point mark in its first two meets. Last year, the team went four meets into the season before reaching 226, and they did so only twice.

This meet will be the last opportunity for fans to see three seniors who have been major contributors over the last several years.

Among those leaving is Fabricio Olsson, Brazilian National Champion and one of the Cougars' top all-arounders over the last four years. He has qualified for the NCAA in each of his first three years. This year he hit career bests on vault (9.75) and in all-around (57.15).

Another senior, Trent Wells, has been one of BYU's best on the floor and vault for the three years he has competed for the Cougars. In addition, Jason Foreman, a consistent performer on rings for two years, was injured at the beginning of the season and has not competed this year.

The team has been plagued by injuries this season with sophomore Warde Allen redshirting because of an ankle injury. Adam Fox dislocated a vertebrae on the pommel horse. Olsson was forced to rest on several events last week due to a nagging wrist injury. He may be on the sidelines again this weekend.

"Fabricio (Olsson) may still have to sit out on pommels and parallel bars, but we might try to get him on all-around since this is his last home meet," Sakamoto said.

Last week, terrible weather conditions in Utah forced the team to drive to Las Vegas to catch a flight to Los Angeles for the Peter Vidmar Invitational. Despite the stressful conditions, BYU recorded their third 226-point performance of the season.

Their 226.25 was good enough to put them in second place behind fourth-ranked California. Young took the all-around title with a score of 55.5 and Chris Hart scored a personal best 9.7 on the parallel bars.

as Tyson's manager, confidant, adviser and promoter from 1988 to 1998, directing and developing every aspect of Tyson's career, the lawsuit said.

At the time, the lawsuit said, "Tyson was a young professional fighter without any formal education, and King was an experienced boxing promoter and manager with a veritable army of professional advisers."

"King knew that Tyson had a fundamental inability to read and understand contracts and fully appreciate the effect of business transactions on his life," it alleged.

King found ways to carve up Tyson's purse so that little of the fight money made it to the boxer, the lawsuit said.

Tyson was required to pay consulting fees to King's wife, son and son-in-law and other fees to King's daughter, who was president of the Mike Tyson Fan Club, the lawsuit said.

Tyson also paid for travel expenses incurred by King and those who traveled with him to meet Tyson as well as the cost of security, corporate cars, renovations at King's businesses, unusually large purses to other undercard fighters promoted by King and fees for King's legal battles, the lawsuit said.

The lawsuit alleged that King even took advantage of Tyson's imprisonment, visiting him and persuading him to sign contracts when he knew the boxer had no access to an attorney.

The last visit was five days before his release.

Next week, King is scheduled to go on trial in federal court in Manhattan on charges that he and Don King Productions had faked a contract with Lloyd's of London insurance company to collect $350,000 in non-existent training expenses for a canceled 1991 bout between Julio Cesar Chavez and Harold Brazier.

Lacrosse looks to swat Weber State

By KAREN DUFFIN
Universe Sports Writer

BYU's national champion lacrosse team will play its first home game Saturday night against Weber State.

This will be the first game for the Cougars in the newly created Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Lacrosse League (RMILL). With eight new college club teams in the league, Weber State among them, the Cougars don't know quite what to expect.

Head coach Jason Lamb does not anticipate Saturday's game to be close because this is Weber State's lacrosse team's first year.

"We have been in Weber's shoes," Lamb said. "We entered the league brand new in 1990 and took a beating. You just have to so you can get better."

Lamb said BYU is just looking to help Weber State have a good experience. However, the team does not intend to lower its level of play. Lamb said he hopes the game will keep BYU at the high level of competition required for their first-ever trip back East in two weeks.

As president of the RMILL, Lamb helped initiate the organization of the new league. Previously the league was a mix of varsity and club teams. This year, the three varsity teams that were in the league withdrew, and eight new club teams have been added.

Some of the schools now in the league previously had lacrosse teams but did not compete in the league. Other schools did not even have a team prior to this year.

Lamb said the league needed to expand in order to keep up with the fast-paced growth of the sport.

"You have to embrace the expansion if you want to see the sport grow," said Lamb.

Lacrosse is particularly expanding in Utah. In 1994, there were no high school lacrosse teams in the state. Today there are 18.

"Lacrosse is a great spectator sport," Lamb said. "It is very physical and quick. The field is the same size as soccer, but the ball moves ten times as fast."

Lamb also said lacrosse is becoming more popular because it is another option for a sport kids can play in the spring. Lacrosse tends to attract the kinds of athletes who participate in football and basketball because the intensity is much higher than the other main spring sport, baseball.

Lacrosse fans can see the game Saturday night at 7 on Haws Field. Admission is $3 or $2 with student ID.

CBS swaps announcers for March Madness

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Graduation, early departures and new recruits force college basketball coaches to overhaul their teams almost every year.

CBS has made its own changes, shuffling its roster heading into this month's NCAA tournament.

Gone are studio host Pat O'Brien and executive producer Rick Gentile. The major new comers are executive producer Terry Ewert, who observed the coverage last year, studio host Greg Gumbel and analyst Dean Smith.

Also new to CBS this year are game announcers Jim Durham, Ian Eagle, Rolando Blackman and Jim Spanarkel.

Ewert plans a fresh approach — protecting areas of natural fan interest and eliminating the four-screen format that irritated many viewers.

"We are conscious of certain fan bases, and we don't want to disrupt that," said Ewert, who was hired by CBS just before the tournament last year. "One of the hot buttons last year was when we switched a Kansas audience out of a Kansas game to Cal-Princeton. We want to diminish that sort of thing."

Gumbel returns to CBS this weekend after four years at NBC. Smith, college basketball's most victorious coach, was with North Carolina during the last 23 tournaments.

"It is very difficult to be objective," said Smith, who still watches film with the Tar Heels' coaches and refers to the team as "we."

"I remember in 1994 that I was bragging on Duke so much that Arkansas fans kept writing me letters," said Smith, a guest analyst for CBS at that Final Four. "I probably went too far overboard."

Gumbel has called play-by-play for five tournaments on CBS. But since leaving the network in 1994, he hasn't done a college basketball game.

"It would be ridiculous to try to pretend that I know so much about the game. I haven't followed it all year long," he said. "My eyes have been on the Rockets and Jazz, not Duke and North Carolina."

So Gumbel will lean heavily on studio veteran Clark Kellogg, now at CBS full time after spending the last five tournaments on loan from ESPN.

"My job is to prod Clark and Dean and push them along to get the best analysis out of them," he said. "I don't know if Dean will have something to say about everything. I'm sure Clark will."

With Gumbel manning the studio all day Thursday and Friday, Jim Nantz will be free to call the first round with Billy Packer. While Gumbel sought studio advice from Nantz, he had some of his own for Nantz on the pitfalls of the first round.

"Covering four games in one day is one of the most unbelievable experiences I have had," Gumbel said. "Out of eight teams, two or three you will barely have heard of and two will be without names on their back."

Before the Big Dance can begin, the conference tournaments and selection show must finish. ESPN has wall-to-wall coverage of the ACC and Big East tournaments this weekend.

Car seats recalled

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chiefs of two federal safety agencies complained Thursday that a major child-seat maker was reluctant to recall 800,000 of its popular combination infant carrier-car seats.

Ann Brown, chairman of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, said most recalls go smoothly, but, with Evenflo Co., "we felt like we've been dragging them every step of the way."

The recall is of the Evenflo On My Way child seat and carrier, model numbers 207 and 492, built over a year and a half ago ending in July 1997.

When the seat is used as an infant carrier, the locking mechanism on the carrier's handle can suddenly slip, cause the seat to flip forward and toss babies on the ground, officials said.

Evenflo spokesman Bob Potter issued the following statement: "Evenflo worked closely with both the (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration) and the CPSC to identify and resolve this issue. A considerable amount of research and testing was done by all three parties, and all of that testing was freely shared."

Evenflo and a rival company, Century, make most of the child seats sold in the United States.

Parents plead guilty to neglect

Associated Press

TRENTON — Feelings in this rural, northern Utah farming community were mixed after Chris and Becky Tucker admitted to starving and neglecting their 6-year-old daughter.

"We're still 100 percent behind the Tuckers," said Loren Christensen, a neighbor of the Tuckers.

Chris Tucker pleaded guilty to second-degree felony child abuse Wednesday, and his wife pleaded guilty to a third-degree child abuse charge in a case that shook the community.

The Tuckers were accused of locking their adopted daughter in a concrete basement with only a tub of murky water and bare bedsprings.

A state investigator responded to a tip from a friend and found the girl; she weighed only 31 1/2 pounds. She had trouble standing upright and could take only a few steps on her own. Her hair was full of lice, her poorly developed teeth were nubs and her skeletal body was covered with bruises and burn-like lesions.

Assistant Attorney General Karl Perry said the girl, now 7, and her 4-year-old half-sister will be put up for adoption. As part of Wednesday's plea bargain, the Tuckers relinquished parental rights to the two girls.

Teens protest 'eat meat' ads

Associated Press

LAYTON — The animal-rights campaign has come to this rural northern Utah community, with about 20 young protesters rallying outside Carl's Jr., a fast-food restaurant.

The teens, who called their group "Animal Rights Education," carried signs Wednesday and chanted, "You must understand; the blood is on your hands."

"We just want to educate people on how meat consumption and using animals can be cruel and a casualty on the environment," said group president Sean Diener.

Wednesday's protest passed without incident. The group said it will picket other restaurants in the future.

Animal-rights activists said they targeted Carl's Jr. because of the company's aggressive "Eat Meat" advertising campaign last year.

A spokeswoman for Carl's Jr., Suzi Brown, said the company's ads haven't been well received by the animal-rights community. Several of the franchise's 708 stores in the West have been targeted by protesters.

"We sell 3.5 million beef and chicken sandwiches a week. There is a demand. Someone out there wants to eat them," Brown said.

Leaks anger Clinton, Jordan speaks to jury

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton denounced the leak of his sworn testimony about Monica Lewinsky on Thursday, while presidential friend Vernon Jordan denied his assistance to Clinton's former intern had any sinister motive.

Jordan, a prominent lawyer and Clinton confidant, said that while he kept the president apprised of his effort to find Lewinsky a lawyer and a job, he was not trying to influence a statement she filed in the Paula Jones case denying a sexual relationship with Clinton.

"I did not in any way tell her, encourage her, to lie. ... My efforts to find her a job were not a quid pro quo for the affidavit she signed," Jordan said after finishing a second day of grand jury testimony.

In a busy day at the federal courthouse, nearly overshadowed by the surfacing of Clinton's deposition, Lewinsky's lawyers also met in private with the chief judge as they tried to compel prosecutors to give her full immunity in exchange for her cooperation.

While none of Lewinsky's lawyers would comment on the purpose of the hearing before U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson, lead attorney William Ginsburg, has contended that his client has a valid deal with prosecutor Kenneth Starr for limited immunity in return for her testimony. Starr has contended there is no deal.

As he left the courthouse, the normally talkative Ginsburg said he would not comment, saying "I follow court rules. That's not unlike me at all."

Two individuals familiar with Clinton's deposition, given in connection with Jones' sexual harassment suit, said he acknowledged under oath that he and Jordan discussed efforts to find a job for Lewinsky. But he denied in the deposition that he had had a sexual relationship with the former intern.

In a brief exchange with reporters at the White House, Clinton refused to discuss his answers in the sworn deposition.

> "I'm going to follow the law. That's what I wish everyone else would do."
>
> — President Bill Clinton

"The court has made it absolutely clear it is illegal to leak and discuss it. I'm going to follow the law. That's what I wish everyone else would do," Clinton said.

The president's private lawyers were poised to file papers in Little Rock, Ark., with U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright, seeking an order to stop the leaks and punish those responsible.

Clinton also discussed another woman in his deposition, schoolmate Dolly Kyle Browning, who has claimed they had an affair, The Washington Post reported in Friday's editions. Clinton denied having a sexual relationship with Browning but said she threatened to write a book falsely claiming they did, the Post reported. Browning, who wrote a novel about a woman who has a romantic relationship with a governor, told the Post she was outraged by Clinton's testimony.

"He is lying and has committed perjury," she said.

Clinton also testified that the job-seeking effort on behalf of Lewinsky was initiated by his personal secretary, Betty Currie, according to the individuals, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Clinton also said in the deposition that he discussed with Lewinsky the likelihood she would be asked to testify in the Jones case. But Clinton described it as a quick, casual exchange in the presence of Currie, according to The Washington Post and the individuals.

Attorneys for Jones, the newspaper said, had given the president a written list of activities that they said constituted sexual relations when they asked him about his relationship with Lewinsky. The list included groping and oral sex, but not mouth-to-mouth kissing. Clinton denied in the deposition — as he has publicly — that he had a sexual relationship with Lewinsky.

At the federal courthouse here, several major figures appeared — all for different reasons.

While Jordan was on the third floor for more questioning from Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's prosecutors, Ginsburg was in conference on the second floor and Clinton lawyer Robert Bennett arrived to give a speech to legal interns.

Bennett wasted little time going before the throng of reporters and television camera crews to denounce the leak of details of the deposition, which first appeared in Thursday's Post.

Bennett called the leak "one of the most reckless, reprehensible and unethical things I've seen in this town for a very, very long time. ... It's almost impossible to determine how these things get leaked, but there can be no doubt the antagonists, those who want to hurt him, and hurt him badly, have done this."

Inspections allowed, says Iraq

Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A 50-member team of U.N. weapons inspectors returned to Iraq on Thursday, led by an American whose presence helped touch off the Gulf crisis — a standoff they hope to verify is over.

Scott Ritter and his team arrived from Bahrain at the Habaniya military airport outside Baghdad and were driven to the United Nations headquarters in a van and a bus.

Ritter's team will "carry out inspections, including surprise inspections, to some of the sensitive sites," the official Iraqi News Agency said.

Sensitive sites are ministries and security facilities, which can be inspected only under special procedures in effect since June 1996.

Ritter's team had been prevented from entering some suspected weapons sites in January after Iraq alleged he was an American spy and that his team had a disproportionately high number of Americans.

In an unusual move, the government told television crews and photographers they cannot go into U.N. headquarters to cover Ritter's arrival. One ministry official said Ritter "is not an important event."

His return follows the U.N.-Iraq accord of Feb. 23 under which Iraq agreed to give inspectors full access to eight presidential palaces that Baghdad previously declared off limits.

The accord was worked out by U.N. chief Kofi Annan, who appointed a retired Indian diplomat on Thursday as his special representative to Iraq. Prakash Shah, 58, a former Indian ambassador to the United Nations, is part of an effort by Annan to expand contacts with the Iraqi leadership.

Palace inspections are not expected to start until the United Nations and the Iraqis agree on new rules for them. Those rules, the subject of intense discussions Thursday between U.N. and Iraqi officials in New York, have not been finalized. But diplomatic sources said a draft was delivered to Iraqi officials on Wednesday.

Ritter's team is only one of several that are deployed in Iraq. The other groups have worked daily, including through the crisis over the presidential sites.

INA said eight teams carried out inspections Thursday of seven sites already under surveillance. It is not known when Ritter and his team will start their work.

The 15-member U.N. Security Council has warned Iraq of "severest consequences" if it reneges on the Feb. 23 accord.

U.S. officials said the resolution gives the United States a green light to attack Iraq in such a case. But council members Russia, France and China insist the resolution does not authorize automatic military action.

The weapons inspectors must certify whether Iraq has eliminated all its weapons of mass destruction before U.N. sanctions, imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of neighboring Kuwait, can be lifted.

DNA fights for 'The Fugitive'

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — New DNA tests show that blood found on Dr. Sam Sheppard's pants and in his home was not his own, bolstering the theory that an intruder killed Sheppard's wife in 1954, said an attorney for his son Thursday.

Earlier tests also revealed the blood wasn't from Sheppard's slain wife, Marilyn.

"We now have conclusive evidence that Dr. Sheppard did not kill his wife," said Terry Gilbert, an attorney for Sheppard's son, Thursday of the case that inspired the TV series and movie "The Fugitive."

At a news conference, Gilbert displayed crime scene photos and charts to show that Sheppard's blood was not found on his pants or in several other spots around the home — including a blood stain on a wardrobe door less than two feet away from where Mrs. Sheppard was found.

Sam Reese Sheppard, 50, of Oakland, Calif., is trying to clear his father's name. He believes his mother's killer is Richard Eberling, a former window washer at the Sheppard home.

Eberling is in prison for a 1984 murder of an elderly widow, but denies killing Mrs. Sheppard. He was ordered by the court to provide DNA samples in the case.

Sheppard's body was exhumed in September so that tissue samples could be examined by Dr. Mohammad Tahir, an Indianapolis forensics expert.

"Now we know through DNA testing that he didn't bleed and he didn't deposit DNA on any of these critical pieces of evidence," Gilbert said.

Prosecutors questioned the tests' validity, saying the crime scene was trampled.

What the Sheppard team "interprets as good news may not be reliable evidence," said prosecutor Stephanie Tubbs Jones.

Sheppard, who died in 1970 at age 46, nearly penniless of liver disease, always insisted that a bushy-haired intruder killed his pregnant wife at the couple's suburban Cleveland home and knocked him unconscious after a struggle.

Sheppard spent 10 years in prison after he was found guilty of murder. But the U.S. Supreme Court overturned his conviction and he was acquitted at a retrial in 1966.

His estate is suing Ohio, alleging wrongful imprisonment. The estate could collect about $2 million if the doctor is found innocent — a tougher legal standard than a "not guilty" verdict.

Prosecutors have asked the Ohio Supreme Court to dismiss the suit. A ruling is expected this spring.

Earlier DNA tests conducted by Tahir revealed that Eberling could not be ruled out as a match for bloodstains from Sheppard's pants, a wood chip from a basement stair and a stain on the back porch.

He said Eberling could not be ruled out as the source of DNA found on two vaginal swabs taken during Mrs. Sheppard's autopsy.

At the news conference, Tahir was unable to give the odds that the blood or semen was Eberling's. But he said there is a "consistent pattern" that is similar to Eberling's.

32 killed by bus bombs in Sri Lanka

Associated Press

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — A bus laden with shrapnel-packed bombs raced into the capital's crowded business district Thursday and exploded, killing at least 32 people and wounding more than 300, authorities said. Suspicion fell on guerrillas of the nation's Tamil minority.

The bus, empty of all but the driver, blew apart outside a train station, ripping the fronts off buildings and shredding dozens of vehicles. The dead included at least three children from schools in the area and two police officers, said police and defense ministry spokesmen.

Books, a plastic lunch box and children's shoes were strewn near an overturned van at the scene. Hundreds of injured were rushed to Colombo's main hospital, and weeping parents rushed to the area to try to account for their children.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but Police Superintendent Palitha Perera said "it definitely looks like the work of the Tigers."

Defense Ministry spokesman Sarath Munasinghe said the driver of the bus had run a stop sign at a police checkpoint, prompting police to give chase. The bus "mowed down" a policewoman who had tried to stop it, Munasinghe said.

Munasinghe said the original bus route would have taken it down the same road used by government ministers on their way to parliament, which was in session.

The driver of the bus, believed to be a suicide bomber, was among the dead.

Lokuarachchige Sriyawathie, hit in the left arm and in his face by flying glass, had come to the neighborhood to pick up his son from school.

"Just as we got to the school gate, there was a huge explosion and I was knocked down by the blast," he said.

Phone lines in the city were jammed as residents sought information about the blast.

The explosion, which could be heard a half-mile away, occurred just after noon at the intersection of several of the city's busiest streets and near a police station.

The front of the train station was badly damaged, and the police station slightly damaged. At least 40 vehicles on the streets were destroyed and about 50 nearby shops were damaged, police said.

Tamils claim they are discriminated against by the majority Sinhalese, who control the government and military.

Although most of the fighting in Sri Lanka's civil war has been in the northeast Tamil heartland, rebels have made several daring attacks in the south, including bombings in the capital.

On Jan. 25, days before independence celebrations were held at the country's most important Buddhist shrine, bombers attacked the temple just east of Colombo. Fifteen people were killed.
